1. Claims 19-20 and 24-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. This rejection is based on the confusing wording of claim 24. Since "it" apparently refers to "process", the limitations following are confusing because they refer to a structure rather than manipulative steps.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 17-18 and 21-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fiedler et al. (2,979,392). Fiedler et al. disclose or suggest the basic claimed method for the production of a reinforced foam part including (1) forming a hollow external formed part (note the reference to a pipe at column 3, line 55), (2) locating a prepreg body within the hollow external formed part, (3) providing a metal foam material within the hollow external formed part by foaming the prepreg body within the hollow part, and (4) simultaneously with the foaming, contacting the metal foam material with at least a part of the hollow external formed part so that the foam rest in form-fit relation (note the integral part disclosed at column 3, line 72) against the hollow external formed part. Forming a pipe (the hollow external formed part) of metal is well known and would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in order to form a stable perform with the capability to withstand stresses.

Fiedler et al. teach the formation of closed cells, as in claim 18, at column 3, lines 46-50. Fiedler et al. appear not to explicitly discuss resistance to deformation, but it is well known that forming a foam core within a hollow preform enhances resistance to deformation and loading properties (relative to a hollow body filled with only gas) and such would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art practicing the process of Fiedler et al. in order to add strength to the article. It is submitted that pipe materials proposed by Fiedler et al. are considered to be "workable", as in claims 21-23.

4. Applicants' arguments filed November 11, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicants' arguments are considered to be moot by the examiner based on the revised grounds of rejection introduced in this Office action.
